

WILSON GIVES CONGRESS HIS OPINION AS TO THE GOVERNMENT'S POLICY ON MEXICAN AFFAIRS

FAVORS INTERFERENCE AND EMBARGO ON PERMITTING ARMS AND MUNITIONS OF WAR TO EITHER SIDE.

AMERICANS TO LEAVE

Offers Congress Pacific Plan of Permitting Two Factions to Fight It Out Until Question Is Settled and Peace Made.

Wilson appeared in person before Congress today and laid bare to the world the details of the nation's efforts to bring about peace in Mexico. The facts concerning Huerta's rejection of the peaceful proposals and policies to be pursued by this government. The president announced the proposals of the United States to be as follows:

No armed intervention. No neutrality, forbidding exportation of arms or ammunition of any kind from United States to any part of the Republic of Mexico. Under no circumstances to be parties to either party in the contest against the peaceful Huerta or to assume the vital empire between them. For all Americans to leave Mexico at once and to assist them to get away in every way possible. To let every one in Mexico who assumes authority to know that this government shall vigilantly watch the fortunes of those Americans who cannot get away and who hold those responsible for their suffering and losses to a definite reckoning.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 27.—President Wilson has given to Congress his views on the Mexican situation. In brief it is a policy of non intervention, of urging the Americans now in Mexico to leave the country until more peaceful times and the stopping of the shipments of arms and munitions of war into the troublesome sister republic below the Rio Grande.

President Wilson met the joint session of Congress shortly after their convening at twelve forty-five. His address was brief and to the point of issue he seeks to impress on the minds of the public. That the United States efforts at a special solution of the question of difference between the warring factions of Mexico having been refused by the Huerta government, we should bottle them up and let them fight it out but take care that no Americans are hurt in the fighting.

Even while President Wilson was giving his views to Congress a new note from the Huerta government to John Lind, Wilson's special ambassador, was rushed to the White House. Lind is preparing to return to the United States, in an effort to have his contents reach Washington before Wilson reads his message to Congress. Evidently it had not arrived, for Wilson gave his address on scheduled time.

If Congress follows Wilson's advice and sits back and lets the fight go on either side or the other until actually requests the good offices of the United States it is considered, barely possible some nation will step in and take a hand itself. It is the other hand Congress decides to take the initiative it will find opposition from the president and his followers who will follow out Wilson's plans for non interference and an embargo on all arms and munitions of war being shipped into the country.

Wilson's Speech. "It is clearly my duty to lay before you very fully and without reservation the facts concerning our present relations with the Republic of Mexico. The deplorable conditions of affairs in Mexico I need not describe, but I deem it my duty to speak very frankly of what this government has done and should seek to do in future. Our obligations to Mexico herself as a friend and neighbor and to American citizens whose lives and vital interests are readily affected by the distressed condition beyond our Southern border.

Touch Us Closely. "These conditions touch us very closely. Not merely because they lie at our very doors, that of course makes us more vividly aware of them, but because every instinct of neighborly interest and sympathy is aroused and quickened by them; but that is only one element in the determination of our duty. We are glad to call ourselves the friends of Mexico, and we shall hope have many an occasion in happier times as well as in these days of trouble and confusion to show that our friendship is genuine and disinterested, capable of sacrifice and ever generous magnanimity.

Peace for Mexico. "Peace, prosperity and contentment of Mexico mean more, much more to us, than merely an enlarged field for our commerce and enterprise. They mean an enlargement of the field of self government and the realization of the hopes and rights of a nation whose best aspirations have so long been suppressed and disappointed and with whom we deeply sympathize.

We shall yet prove to the Mexican people that we know how to serve them without first thinking how we shall serve ourselves. But we are not only our friends of Mexico, the whole world desires her peace and progress, and the whole world is interested as never before. Mexico lies at last where all the world looks on. Central America is about to be cut by the great route of the world trade and intercourse running free from ocean to ocean across the isthmus. The future has much in store for Mexico as for all the states of Central America, but the best gift can be made only when we are ready and willing to receive them and to enjoy them honorably.

Wait Peace. "America—America north and south and both continents—waits up-of those Americans who cannot get away and shall hold those responsible for their suffering and losses to a definite reckoning. That can and will be made plain beyond any possible misunderstanding.

No Aid. "For the rest I deem it my duty to exercise the authority conferred upon me by law of March 1912, to see to it that neither side of the struggle now going on in Mexico receive any aid from this side of the border. I shall assume the best practice of all nations in matters of neutrality by forbidding the exportation of arms, ammunition of war of any kind from the United States to any part of the Republic of Mexico by a policy suggested by several interesting precedents and many manifold considerations of practical expediencies we cannot under the circumstances become the partisans of either party in the contest that now distresses Mexico between them.

Backed by Powers. "I am happy to say that several of the greatest governments of the world have given this government the generous moral support in urging upon the provincial authorities in receipt of our proffered good offices in the spirit in which they were made.

Open to Resumption. "Negotiations for mediation of the United States are open to resumption at any time upon either the initiative of this government or of Mexico. Appended to the president's address was the report of the Huerta government rejecting the American proposals. It was signed by foreign minister Gamboa and suggested the following policy for the United States.

The Terms. "Reception of a Mexican ambassador in Washington. That the United States send a new ambassador to Mexico without restraint. Strict observance of the neutrality laws and see to it that no material or no assistance is given to the rebels. Complete recognition of the Huerta government.

Not Paralleled. "The occasion has not been paralleled in more than a century. No other president since George Washington has appeared before Congress on a foreign affair. The senators filed into the house two by twos and the president entered the house and took his stand at the desk of Speaker Clark on the platform beside Vice President Marshall.

The president, attired in a conventional black frock suit caused a hush in the large audience when he took his place and began the reading of his address in the easy, conversational tone for which he is noted.

President Wilson said that as a friend this country could wait no longer for a solution of the affairs of the sister republic. From that point he read his instructions to John Lind. The Instructions. "All America cries for a settlement" was the note John Lind bore to Mexico. The president emphatically placed the execution of his mission by Mr. Lind and said he was lead to believe that the Huerta government rejected the American proposals because the authorities at Mexico City had been grossly misinformed and misled on the matter and upon the mistake in belief that the present administration did not speak for the people of the United States. So long as this condition exists, continued the president, this nation can only await the time of the awakening of their realization to the real facts.

Senator Gamboa's speech was appended to the president's address but was not read by the president, but furnished to Congress as a printed document.

Solemn Occasion. Mrs. Wilson and her daughters and Secretary Bryan had taken places in the executive gallery and other members of the cabinet had taken places on the floor of the house. Every head in the chamber was bowed and the solemnity of the occasion was most strikingly emphasized by the prayer of Henry D. Doudou in his opening prayer said: "Rule thou in the hearts of all rulers and sway the minds of these thy servants, that as a nation may march forward, all that is pure and noble and unselfish in the people of the world shall recognize the purity of our motives."

Was Applauded. A volley of applause rang out as the president's address was read and he plunged into his message without delay and with a bow of acknowledgment of greeting he finished reading at 1:20 o'clock. Another round of applause broke out and all stood in the chamber and started back to the White House. The House adjourned and the senators fled back to their side of the capitol.

HAY FEVER ASSOCIATION MEETS AT BETHLEHEM

Bethlehem, Pa., Aug. 27.—Armed with atomizers, eye washes and cups, throat gargles and handkerchiefs, limited in numbers only by the nurses of the purchasers, several hundred red-nosed, red-eyed, sneezing and sniffing men and women gathered in the city of Bethlehem today for the opening of the fourth annual convention of the United States Hay Fever Association. The association was organized to relieve hay fever sufferers wherever found, and the members are not a bit discouraged over the fact that no panacea has been discovered in the forty years of its existence. A number of interesting reports and addresses have been prepared for presentation to the present convention of over 100 importance will be an article by Prof. P. A. Maigen of Philadelphia, who attacks hay fever from the germ standpoint and who claims to have discovered that germs in identical character are found in cases of rose cold, hay fever and asthma.

This was greeted with a wild outburst of cheering by thousands of Canadian Making Woman's Work Lighter!

Do you know that there are something like 50,000 patented articles, the purpose of each of which is to lighten some part of a woman's work? Do you know that great companies have scores of high priced experts doing nothing else but working out new ideas for the household? It is an education to walk through a modern houseware store; there is something new every day. Labor saving devices form a particularly important part in a woman's life during the hot weather. Merchants and manufacturers bring these new ideas to public notice through the advertising columns of the daily papers. Watch the advertising in The Gazette for suggestions for lightening some of the burdens.

OPPORTUNE RELIEF TO SIX EXPLORERS

Regions Are Found in Serious Condition by Relief Ships.

Christ Church, New Zealand, Aug. 27.—Relief arrived just in the nick of time to save the lives of Dr. Douglas Mawson, the Australian Antarctic explorer, and his five companions who were left in March on Matquarie Island in the Antarctic ocean. When the remaining twenty-four men of Dr. Mawson's expedition returned to Terra Nova six men were left and ample provisions to last them until spring. Word came from a government steamer that the explorer had exhausted all their supplies and had been living for some time on the hearts and kidneys of seal elephants. All of the men were weak when the relief ship reached them. Dr. Mawson's expedition has been unfortunate in losing by death two of its members owing to accidents on the ice. Lieut. Minnie, an English army officer, and Dr. Xavier Merit, a Swiss scientist. The original expedition left Hobart, Tasmania, on December 2, 1911, its principal object being an exploration and survey of the Antarctic coast line. When the Aurora went to take expedition back early this year the vessel was forced to leave before taking on Dr. Mawson and five of his companions as he was in danger of being crushed by ice.

STATE WILL ENFORCE APPRENTICESHIP LAW

Field Representative of Commission in La Crosse Taking Steps to Bring About Compliance.

Enforcement of the provisions of the apprenticeship law, passed by the legislature in 1911, which has been almost entirely ignored by manufacturers and employers of the state, is now demanded by the Wisconsin industrial commission. William M. Liesserson, field representative of the industrial commission, is in La Crosse for the purpose of taking the first steps toward enforcing the law in that city, and in the work about to be undertaken he expects the cooperation of assistants from employers hiring apprentices throughout the state to the end that the latter may become more proficient as skilled workmen and the employer may profit thereby.

Under the new Wisconsin law any person under the age of 18 who endeavors to learn a trade in a workshop in the state and contracts with an employer to this end, must have an agreement in writing, a copy of which must be filed by the employer with the industrial commission. This contract must contain the stipulation that the apprentice shall not work over 55 hours per week, and that he attend a continuation school at least five hours per week.

Little attention has been paid to the apprenticeship law since its enactment, writes Mr. Liesserson, "but we expect to obtain full compliance with the provisions of the measure within a few months. To this end a committee of 10 members of the Wisconsin Manufacturers' association and 10 representatives of the Wisconsin State Federation of Labor will aid the industrial commission in obtaining the names of employers hiring apprentices. During the two years the law has been in force, only about 300 contracts between employers and apprentices have been filed with the commission.

DIDN'T KNOW THE AGES OF HIS FOUR CHILDREN; IS DENIED CITIZENSHIP

La Crosse, Wis., Aug. 27.—A man who does not know the ages of his own children is not made of the right stuff for a good citizen of the United States, according to naturalization authorities here who yesterday sent home John Heller, a La Crosse county farmer who applying for citizenship was unable to supply what they regarded as important information. Heller answered all the questions put to him until the ages of his children was asked him. He faltered and finally gave it up. He had four children, of that he was quite sure, but he did not know how old they were.

Clerk of Court Denniston told him to come back after getting acquainted with his family and knew the ages of his children.

Swift of Massachusetts and several other men of prominence.

STOUGHTON IS IN THE GRIP OF THE TANGO DANCE

Madison, Wis., Aug. 27.—Stoughton, a city fifteen miles from here, has "gone crazy" over the tango dance. In its special invitations issued for dances the following sentence is to be found, "all tango selections and latest waltzes." This town has proved that it can do more than splash paint on wagon wheels and jump 150 feet on skis. It can tango more than any city of its size in the world. At least one tango dance is held every night and the "smart set" has discarded all of the other dances.

FAVOR NEW SYSTEM OF MORTGAGE LOANS

Bankers of Kansas City System Discuss Another Phase of Currency Reform.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 27.—Reforms in the currency system in its relation to farm mortgages were discussed at the conference of the commercial agricultural development and education of the American Bankers' Association today. The subject was introduced when a paper was prepared by Frank Bailey, a banker of New York, was read. Mr. Bailey was unable to attend the meeting. There should be one or more banks placed in every state of the union, Mr. Bailey stated in his paper, where borrowers on mortgages having sufficient collateral could borrow money at the standard rate of interest and the rate of interest should be uniform in every state. The interest loan in money should be national in scope and chartered by the national government. W. N. Wells of Platte City, chairman of the committee on good roads of the Missouri Bankers' Association said it was largely due to the efforts of the bankers' good roads committee that the law providing for rural high school roads was passed at the last session of the Missouri legislature.

The girl wrote a letter recently to President Wilson saying that her father was soon to take the management of a hotel in Yellowstone Park, that he dog Fanny was the same age and that they had never been separated.

LAUDS EFFICIENCY OF HIGH SCHOOLS

Illinois Teacher Finds Wisconsin High Schools Taking Pupils Away from Academies.

La Crosse, Wis., Aug. 27.—"There is a chance of the high schools becoming too good, looking at the matter from one point of view," said Professor Z. A. Chandler of Lake Forest academy. Dr. Chandler came to La Crosse to ascertain why the big delegation of students from this city and vicinity dwindled down until none had entered for the term about to open. He did not take me long to open the matter, he said. He added that the local high schools were becoming so good that the Wisconsin and Minnesota boys and girls now prefer to take at home the study that they formerly used to pursue in an academy. The Lake Forest school is not affected more than other institutions, the same condition prevails as to all preparatory schools and academies.

DELAY THE APPOINTMENT CIVIL SERVICE SECRETARY

Madison, Wis., Aug. 27.—No appointment of a secretary of the civil service commission will be made for thirty days. The commission at a meeting yesterday afternoon decided that it would wait for one month to receive applications before making an appointment. The reason given was that temporarily Chairman T. J. Cunningham of Chippewa Falls would have charge of the office. The next meeting of the commission will be held September 8. Already fifteen appointments have been filed for the position.

WILL SPOIL SPOONING ON LAKE AT CHICAGO BEACHES

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 27.—Too late to spoil any spooning parties on the lake this year, but in time to fortify themselves for the coming season the police have discovered a law that will dispose of spooners who have made the canoes and boats in the lake and have performed the uses of a spoon. The spooners have made themselves immune from any law in this connection, but the admiralty laws covering lake navigation show that spoons of all kinds must carry a certain number of sails. A law that one hundred yards suits the police they say, and even a lantern will do.

G. A. R. TO HOLD FIRST ENCAMPMENT IN GENUINE SOUTH

Meets at Chattanooga, Tennessee, on September 15.—Spooling of War-Time Ill Feeling.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 27.—When the Grand Army of the Republic meets here on September 15 for its forty-seventh national encampment, it will be the first time in history that such an encampment is held in the real south. It is true, one national encampment was held in Louisville, but that city was really too far north and too far removed from the actual seat of the war to be considered as part of the real south. It is different with Chattanooga, the immediate vicinity of which was the scene of some of the bloodiest battles of the civil war, including Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain, Orchard Knob and Missionary Ridge. Undoubtedly there was a time when the selection of Chattanooga as the place of the gathering would have been fatal to the success of a Grand Army encampment. The first fifteen or more years after the close of the war there was still enough of the intense feeling against the north left among the impoverished people of the south to make the selection of a neutral city as the place for holding a Grand Army encampment a matter of doubtful judgment. There would probably have been no hostile demonstrations on the part of the southerners, southern hospitality would not have permitted them to there would have been embarrassment on both sides and unavoidable friction. But time has worked marvelous changes. The old time antagonism has been wiped out; great national problems, common national dangers have brought the north and the south closer together; a clearer recognition of the mutuality of their interests cemented the fractures and comradeship in the camps and upon the battlefield has been the result. The war strengthened the bonds of friendship and loyalty between the north and the south more than anything else could have done.

A real no longer a matter of doubt, the Grand Army has decided to hold the forty-seventh annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in this city, but a recognition of the fact that the chasm between the north and the south is now closed forever and of being embarrassed by the choice of their city the people of Chattanooga are delighted with the prospect of being the hosts of their former foes for a nation of the days beginning September 15. Even an announcement of the choice was made the citizens of Chattanooga have outdone themselves in preparing with true southern hospitality for their visitors.

Since the war the membership of the Grand Army has dwindled considerably and in late years the attendance at the national encampments showed a marked decline. But the veterans are constantly being added to the ranks and the selection of Chattanooga as the place for the encampment will have a stimulating effect upon the attendance and that the number of members and visitors at the coming gathering will be the largest in the history of many previous national encampments.

Correspondence received by Gen. Alfred Beers of Bridgeport, Conn., commander-in-chief of the Grand Army, of the Republic, indicated extraordinary interest in the Grand Army circles throughout the country in the coming encampment. The interest manifested is particularly great among the thousands of veterans who have taken part in the civil war and in the history of Chattanooga. Many of them have never had an opportunity to revisit the historical battlefields and they are highly pleased at the prospect of returning as visitors to the scenes so vivid in their memories of the bloody war.

The preparations for the encampment are progressing rapidly and with enthusiasm. New features of entertainment, calculated to please the visitors, are constantly being added to a program already overflowing with interesting and pleasing features. There will be visits to the famous battle grounds around the city; fireworks and nightly signal fires on Lookout Mountain; the old heights in the vicinity, regimental and state reunions at various points of interest in the surroundings of Chattanooga, easily reached by the new automobiles, will be held. There will be hydro-aeroplan exhibitions, the Tennessee river, steamboat excursions and a sham battle at Chickamauga park.

Various auxiliary organizations of the G. A. R. will also hold their national gatherings during the encampment week and the city will be crowded with visitors during that week. There need be no fear, however, that the city will be unable to accommodate the thousands of visitors, for there are many capacious hotels available and the citizens will gladly open their homes to receive and shelter those who prefer quarters in a private house to hotel accommodations.

LETTER FILE SUPPORT

Can Be Attached to Wall Wherever It is Most Needed.

A wall support for letter files has been designed by a Massachusetts man and any business man can think of places where he would put one. A small board that can be screwed to the wall has a swinging support pivoted to it. This support consists of a long loop of wire, adapted to engage the upper portion of the file and hold the latter in the open position as it was in a bookcase, or standing on the

ARRANGE PROGRAMS FOR VARIOUS DAYS

State Fair Management Makes innovations This Year.

In the arrangement of the general exposition program for the Wisconsin state fair, Milwaukee, September 8-12, the board of agriculture made a certain day in recognition of manufacturers and dealers. Tuesday, September 9, has been designated as "Manufacturers' and Dealers' Day."

On Tuesday, manufacturers and dealers will be the scene of many special programs for both amusement and demonstration of exhibits throughout the day and evening. Special musical programs and lectures will be provided. Exhibitors of these lines are co-operating with the board and are featured in the feature displays on that day. Increased interest in this department throughout the state is shown by the entry list, practically all former exhibitors and many new ones having registered their demands for space. The International Harvester company has asked for 200 front feet of space, besides machinery space in the dairy building after having been absent from the fair for three years. That is a fair criticism of the sentiment of all manufacturers this year. All is explained by the fact that mutual interests of farmers and manufacturers as farmers come becoming stronger as farmers come to use elaborate machinery and mechanical power in their regular work. An important division of this department will be the automobile exhibit, dealers in automobiles being anxious to show their latest designs to farmers who are important prospective buyers and many manufacturers having hastened to complete their new models in time for display at the state fair.

Monday, September 8, is the first day of the fair and as usual is designated as "Opening Day." The fair will be opened officially Monday morning at 9 o'clock with all exhibits in place and special programs will be provided for that day.

Wednesday has been designated as "State Day." The governor and state officials will be special guests on that day and special addresses will be given at the grandstand, on the plaza and on different parts of the grounds. That being the exact centennial of Commodore Perry's naval victory on Lake Erie, Sept. 10, 1813, it is probable that portions of the program will be in recognition of the fact. The state championship spelling contest will take place on that day.

Thursday, September 11th, has been designated as "Milwaukee Day." A holiday will be officially declared and it is expected that all employers will close their factories and places of business for at least half a day. Milwaukee business men already are making preparations that are expected to result in new records for Milwaukee representation at the state fair.

Friday, September 12th, will be "Children's Day." On that day all children under 15 years of age will be admitted free when accompanied by parents, guardian or teacher. It is expected that special recognition of this day will be made by the Milwaukee public schools and that all records for children attendance will be broken. Besides special programs, special efforts to instruct and entertain children will be made for all departments.

Several bands will be in attendance every day of the fair. Irwin Bros. Cheyenne Wild West show will give programs every evening. Between 7 and 8 o'clock there will be stock parades, horse shows and special programs in the pavilions every day and night. The race program provides a good card every day.

CHAUTAUQUAS HAVE BECOME IMPORTANT

This is the Opinion of an Expert Discussing Chautauques and Agricultural Education.

"Chautauques have become highly important recently in the teaching of agriculture. Each year, according to E. Jenks in his annual review of agricultural instruction for the United States Bureau of Education, 'the Chautauque movement becomes a more decided factor in the education of the farmer. The programs, which in the early history of the movement consisted principally of Bible study and recreation, have been considerably broadened, and special features dealing with agriculture are becoming more popular and more frequent. It is now a common occurrence to find these programs offering courses in stock judging, poultry raising, soils, seed testing, household economy, etc.'

"Scores of new assemblies are organized every year, and the favorite field is the rural district. Over 500 local chautauques were held the past season in Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, and Missouri, more than 100 being held in towns with an average population of only 500. In some places, boys' and girls' clubs have been formed in connection with the chautauques, and exhibitions and demonstrations of their work have formed an important part of the program.

Another special agency in agricultural education described by Mr. Jenks is the Grange, or to give it its official title, 'The Order of Patrons of Husbandry.' Since its revival in 1890 the Grange has developed into the largest and most influential national organization of farmers, with 20,000 subsidiary granges and more than a million members. Educational work is prominent in the Grange, the 'lecture hour' being everywhere established. There is frequently series of lectures on some problem of agricultural education, and here and there classes have been formed to carry on college work in agriculture by correspondence. Particularly important has been the influence of the Grange in having agriculture introduced into the public schools as a regular school subject.

BAD BILLS FOUND TO BE IN CIRCULATION

Government Sleuths Send Out Warning Against Bogus Ten Dollar Bills.

Two counterfeit $10 national bank notes have made their appearance, and the secret service force of the government is hot on the trail of the men who are thus seeking to increase the volume of paper currency. One bill is accredited to the First National bank of Chicago, and the other purports to have been issued by the Farmers and Merchants' National bank of Los Angeles, Cal. The treasury department in a statement today, says: "The figures in the bank and treasury numbers are poorly formed and out of alignment. The latter work is very good. The back of the bill is a darker shade of green than the genuine. The paper feels thick and harsh."

ERECT SCAFFOLD AT JAIL; IT'S NOT FOR EXECUTION

Workmen were busy today erecting a scaffold on the north side of the county jail. It is not for the purpose of an early morning execution, however, as such affairs are impossible under the Wisconsin laws. It will serve for the more useful purpose of enabling masons to raise the chimney on the north side of the jail some six or eight feet to provide a better draught.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Mouthsburg, Ont., Aug. 27.—One hundred years ago this autumn occurred the battle of Chrysler's Farm, one of the notable engagements of the last war between Great Britain and the United States. Today the centennial of this battle is being celebrated by school children of eastern Ontario and a military display furnished by troops drawn from the same section. Tomorrow the celebration will conclude with a program of addresses by men prominent in Canadian public life.

The battle of Chrysler's Farm was fought Nov. 11, 1813, on the Canadian side of the St. Lawrence, below Okauchung. Sixteen hundred Americans under Gen. Boyd and 1500 British troops under Col. Morrison were engaged in the conflict. The Americans were repulsed with a loss of 102 killed and 326 wounded.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Aug. 27.—The fourth annual reunion of the La Follette family will be held Thursday at Crawfordville, Ind. Last year at the meeting about 275 members of the La Follette family gathered from all parts of the country to the celebration. The La Follette genealogy as compiled by John La Follette of Iowa shows that the original ancestors were silk manufacturers in France.

The La Follette's of Wisconsin settled at Primrose in Dane county in 1851. Senator La Follette and Mrs. R. G. Sighecker are the only surviving members of the original La Follette family in Wisconsin.

No Drunks Today: No drunks were held for court today. Four were locked in the police station last evening but none were thought entitled to a hearing in court and they were dismissed with a warning. Chief Ramsey expressed the opinion that although there is no judge of the municipal court at the present time, drunks can be arraigned before a justice of the peace if desired.

THE SPENDTHRIFT.

No better class of theatrical attractions can be found today west of New York than those owned, equipped and managed by C. S. Primrose, the thrifty and successful caterer to a theatrical-loving public. The owner of six recent American-London successes he has, in the last three years, with tireless energy risen from the ranks of the obscure producer to the foremost position among the leading American managers. Chief among the possessions of this young climber is "The Spendthrift"—a play bearing the approval stamp of two continents, which, with Miss Marion Sherwood heading the company comes to the Myers Theater on Monday, September 1, matinee and evening.

Miss Sherwood's friends in the West are legion by reason of the impression made upon the public through the magnet of her personal charms and great dramatic powers. Her portrayal of the leading lady, last season, in "The Thief" won immediate and unstinted praise of the highest order among the most prominent theatrical critics in the East and South. Gifted with a rare southern type of beauty, a clear enunciation born in the possession of a rich contralto speaking voice combined with dramatic talent compared with Duse, Mary Manning, Margaret Illington and H. F. Fawcett, Miss Sherwood's tour from coast to coast in "The Spendthrift" is heralded as a red letter event of the season as crowded theaters everywhere will attest.

Cooking Requirements.

Are met MOST SATISFACTORILY in kitchens where GAS is used.

If the cooking requires but little heat and is to be done slowly a GAS RANGE can be regulated accordingly, or if intense heat is needed for rapid cooking it is always there for your use.

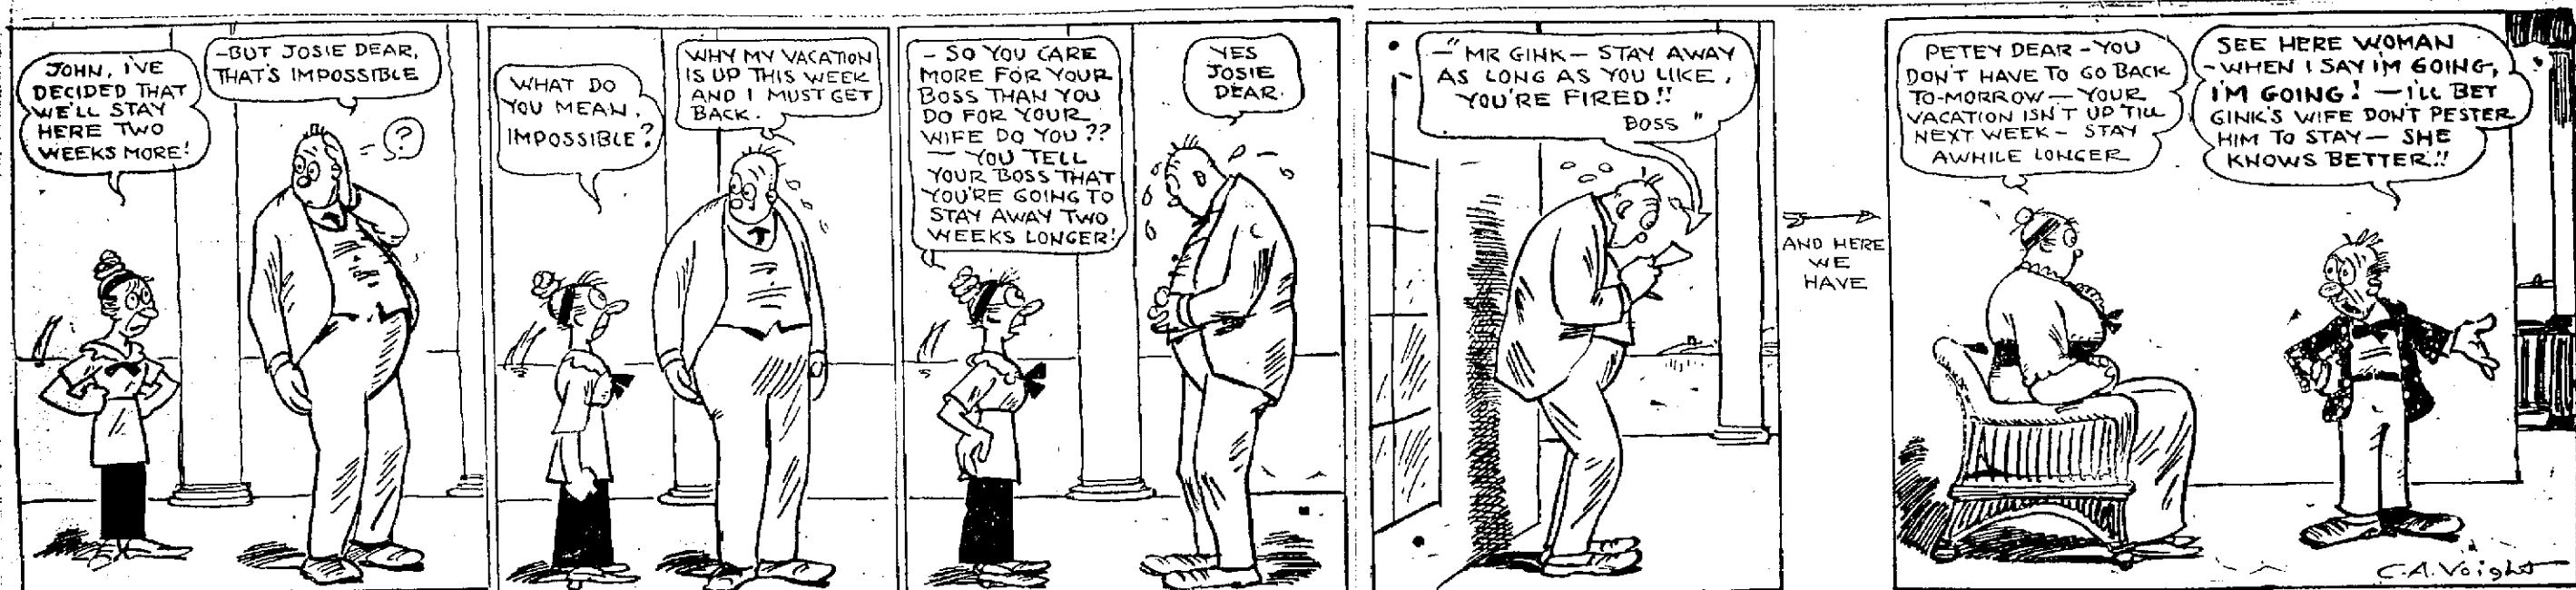

But the complete regulation of a GAS RANGE is only one of its many decided advantages.

An important fact to remember is that GAS IS THE MOST ECONOMIC KITCHEN FUEL.

Dick Gilbert, who recently stopped Mike Shreck in a fight, tells us his recent visit to his old home in Corbin, Ky. Gilbert had just won a bout near his home in Cincinnati, and his fame had spread through the section so rapidly that he looked forward with great pleasure to meeting some of his eight brothers and one sister in the Kentucky home-land. Arrived in partly clothes, Gilbert sauntered up the main street in Corbin for the first time in twelve years. At the home of his married sister, Gilbert stopped and was told to move along, that book agents were not welcome. Gilbert asked for a drink of water and go; it without being recognized. Then he decided to go to the village square, hunt up some old cronies and return to his sister's home later. He met an old chum of boyhood days, but had to explain who he was and what he was doing. "I never thought you'd come to that," said the Kentuckian after he had read the clippings of Gilbert's recent achievement. Gilbert decided to return to his sister, confess and be punished. But he was royally welcomed this time, word having been sent from the village of the newcomer's identity.

Dog Had Appetite for Chicken. A chicken-stealing dog, in the Dumbarion (Scotland) district, recently occasioned some anxiety to a number of hen keepers. On a thorough search being made a number of fowls were recovered buried in a field. Some fowls were eaten, and those not required for immediate use were hidden. It was discovered that the cause of the trouble was a large black Labrador dog, which has been roaming the district at will for several weeks.

BASEBALL CHATTER.

It is said the National Commission is already on the job planning for the world's series between the Giants and the Athletics.

Baseball critics think they see in George Daus, the Detroit pitcher, a copy in action of "Kid" Nichols, the former big league star.

Elmer Steele, formerly of the Pirates, is playing first base for the Danbury team, of the New York-New Jersey league, and hitting well above .300.

President James McAlister of the Red Sox, is well pleased with the showing made by Earl Moseley. Moseley comes from the Youngstown club, the home town of Sir James.

Toronto has a bird of a shortstop in young Pick in a recent Toronto Jersey City double-header, Pick accepted 17 chances without an error, and made seven hits.

The Boston Nationals put one over on several league clubs when they landed Luque and Padrone, the two Cuban stars of the Long Branch (N. J.) team.

THE CURRENCY BILL.

Of even more importance than the tariff measure now being debated in the senate is the proposed currency bill which is being debated by President Wilson. An exchange in commenting upon the subject says that since the days of Robert Morris and Alexander Hamilton, and notwithstanding the unsatisfactory and somewhat unhappy outcome of the United States Bank enterprise, since the days of President Jackson, there has existed in the American nation a strong desire for a banking system that would have the great power of the government at its back. On the other hand, and up to a very recent day acting as a drag to such a sentiment, there has existed widespread popular doubt as to the ability of statesmanship, under a democracy, to so frame a law providing for the establishment of an institution of this character as to afford absolute safeguards to the people and their institutions. Readers of this newspaper need hardly be told that those who from time to time have engaged in an effort to create a banking organization under government auspices and control, partly or wholly, been subjected to severe criticism, and often to unjust suspicion and aspersion.

A reason for this may be found in the fact that nearly all underlings, of this kind, up to the present time, have been carried on solely or mainly under the direction of partisans supposed or known to be closely in sympathy, and even allied, with powerful private capitalistic interests. Moreover, in these cases it has seemed to the onlooking public that solicitude for the welfare of the moneyed establishments and their clients has overshadowed consideration for the mass of the people. How very sensitive, how acutely sensitive, the public is to any tendency toward the legitimizing and nationalizing of a financial oligarchy is evidenced by the scrutiny to which the Glass bill, now before Congress with the sanction of an administration pledged to the public interests, is questioned at every point.

At a frame originally it was supposed to represent the best thought of a long line of students of American finance, to incorporate the chief recommendations of the monetary commission, to stand for the ideas of a safe sound banking and currency system held by President Wilson and his cabinet. Nevertheless, 175 amendments to the bill have been offered and considered in committee, and of these twenty originated with the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. This body, it should be remembered, although representative of the trade and commerce of the country, is by no means concerned in having any undue advantage conferred upon the banking interests. It is representative, that is, of the tens of thousands of industrial and commercial houses of the country which, on the one hand, serve as a medium of trade for the great consuming public, and on the other, are dependent upon the financial establishments for the accommodation necessary to the conduct of this business. Thirteen of the amendments were accepted, but it is no less significant that seven were rejected.

Both in the acceptance and rejection of the Chamber of Commerce amendments, as well as in the volume of amendments from other sources, is there cause for public satisfaction. It must serve to create confidence in the measure finally that amendments are accepted or rejected regardless of the source, and that not a line of the bill is escaping close examination. Not even the tariff measure, important though it is, has been so picked and prodded for possible defects. It does not follow from all this that when the bill shall be reported by the committee it will be perfect, nor that when further scrutinized, altered and amended by both houses of Congress it will be without flaw; but it should be a source of public gratification that, in the absence of experience with its public operation, the Glass bill, if enacted, seems to give promise of a financial system long hoped for and long needed.

It is unfortunate that there has been a delay in the appointment of a judge for the Janesville municipal court owing to the press of business that will greet the new judge when named. However the cleanup of the city has started and it will continue until the laws and ordinances are enforced.

SPUR OF THE MOMENT

Mayer Hit a Hot-Dog Wagon.

One of our truthful friends tells us that he recently witnessed a very peculiar accident while in a small town.

Mayer Cyrus Perkins of the village was riding his bicycle along Main street about 2 o'clock in the afternoon when Miss MacFarlane, leading lady of "The Devil's Own" company which had played at the opera house the night before came along the street clad in a tight-fitting dress. The mayor, forgetting the dignity of his office, turned to look at the young actress and ran his bicycle into a hot dog wagon operated by one Signor Conetti.

The wagon was overturned and a pot of hot sausage fell on the mayor's head. When he was picked up he was smeared with hot dog and hamburger steak gravy. The Italian grew furious and started to pick up his wares, but seven or eight dogs appeared on the scene and began devouring them. The dogs jumped all over the mayor and spoiled his new spring suit. The mayor was sent to the hospital and threatens to have the hot dog vendor's license revoked, while Signor Conetti says the accident was due to contributory negligence, as the mayor had no business to turn and look at the actress. He will sue the mayor for the price of the wagon and spoiled stock.

Glass Cutters.
This is the gladsome season of the year when shifty gentlemen happen along to sell glass cutters. It has often been said that one-half of the world doesn't know how the other half lives. Beyond the shadow of a doubt, one other half lives by selling glass cutters.

It matters not how busy you are, you must lay everything aside and listen to the siren song of the glass cutter agent. He takes from his pocket a perfectly good piece of glass, and produces the cutter and does more tricks with it than Howard Thurston can do with a plug hat full of hard-boiled eggs. After he gives his free exhibition you buy a glass cutter. You can't escape it, though you have nine hundred glass cutters at home and three hundred tucked away in your office desk.

There is a good deal of psychology about the glass cutter business. If you are like the ordinary man you have bought an average of seven glass cutters a week ever since you have had an office and when you want a piece of glass cut you have to take it to a glazier. Nobody on earth can make a patent glass cutter cut glass excepting the man who sells it.

Some men blow their money foolishly over the bar or for gasoline, but the major portion of our surplus has gone for glass cutters. It is a habit, and yet there is a sort of ambition in it, too. We hope some day

McMichael told his sensational story to the house lobby investigating committee. Congressman McDermott is to go on the stand in his own defense and promises to tell some things about the career of McMichael that will create as big a sensation as the story of the latter.

Isaac H. McMichael.

Isaac H. McMichael, the former chief page of the house of representatives, and more lately an elevator conductor in the house office building, accuses Congressman James T. McDermott, the labor representative of the Chicago stockyards district, of working with Colonel Martin Mulhall and the National Association of Manufacturers to defeat tariff legislation and of getting $7,500 from the Washington pawnbrokers for his efforts to defeat the "loan shark bill" in the house.

McMichael is said to be receiving $75 a month from a New York newspaper for writing the story of his twenty years' service as a capitol employe.

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

MARTYRS OF SCIENCE.

The other day Dr. Paulin Mery, former deputy for Paris, died as the result of an operation at the age of fifty-three.

The operation was on his right hand because of injuries received during X ray experiments. Despite injuries and warnings he had kept on with his work. He died a martyr to science.

A short time earlier Dr. Simon, director of the Radiographic Institute of Geneva, lost his left hand for the same cause, while his partner, Dr. Leroy, had sacrificed two fingers. Both are going forward with their experiments.

Late in January Sir George Turner, afflicted with leprosy as a result of his heroic work for the lepers of South Africa, announced that he was going back to devote his life to a battle with the dread disease.

At about the same time Dr. Friedmann told his famous tuberculosis cure before the chief of the German public health department and invited the severest tests. This cure has long been a mystery. Others claimed to have discovered the secret, one from a former employee of Dr. Friedmann, another from a culture taken from a Friedmann patient. It was to give the public the real cure that Dr. Friedmann took this radical step, though to do so he landed to the world the results of long years of patient research and skill.

It is thus that men give themselves for the health of their fellows.

There is infinite hope for an age in which such men thus give life and limb or the fruits of a life's work for the good of mankind. There is no complaint, rather a cheerful and matter of fact surrender of their all that others may live.

To be worthy to live in a time that produces these and countless other martyrs to science it is necessary that we do something.

It is a high standard they set before us. But surely we are good enough sports to accept the challenge.

We, too, will serve mankind, each in his own way, in an attempt to play in the high game of this second decade of the twentieth century.

We may not be martyrs to science or martyrs to anything else, but we, too, can help on the world's progress.

Don't Wait For Your Hogs to Get Sick

It is easier to prevent disease in man or beast than it is to cure it. Many of the hog raisers in this section have sold their hogs at the first sign of sickness. Others have lost them by the dozen rather than sell sick hogs.

And still others have used Sal-Vet when their hogs started to cough, and now have a good sound bunch that will bring top prices when marketed.

One pound of Sal-Vet will last one hog 60 days. And is sold on a guarantee.

If you lose one small pig you have lost the price of 100 lbs. of Sal-Vet and the rest of your herd is also in danger.

Don't run chances on something "just as good" when you can get something that has stood the test and is guaranteed.

100 lbs. Sal-Vet $5.00
40 lbs. Sal-Vet $2.25
20 lbs. Sal-Vet $1.25

We are exclusive agents in Janesville and vicinity for Sal-Vet and if your dealer does not have it, write or phone and we will make prompt shipment.

MANY VIOLATE LAW WITHOUT KNOWING THAT THEY EXIST

Some of the Minor Violations That Happen Every Day in the Year Recounted.

If every citizen in Janesville was arrested each time he violates some state law or municipal ordinance, jail accommodations would be exhausted within twenty-four hours and the present police force would have to be enlarged at least five fold to cope with conditions.

Through thoughtless deeds of lawlessness the majority of Janesville's citizens constantly become liable to fine or jail sentence, although this city cannot be considered a lawless one. Comparing it with any of the other cities of the country, and the number of arrests made here within a year, Janesville is really what the judges like to describe as "a peaceful community." There are hardly ever any "crime waves," and the auto bandit is unknown. Just the same, the average man, woman and child violate at least two laws every day. It is not through a disregard for the law, or any innate depravity on the part of the citizens to obey the law, but is merely carelessness and the fact that the statute books are filled with restrictions it would be undesirable and perhaps hopeless to try and enforce.

Probably one of the most frequently violated city ordinances is that of spitting on the sidewalk. There is a law making this punishable by a fine. There was a time when this law was disregarded generally, but of recent years the practice has been dying out, due probably to the campaigns which have been waged against the habit by health officers and the police.

Another example of the disregard for the law is the smoke nuisance, and while Janesville is not nearly as bad in this respect as the majority of the industrial centers, yet the air is often filled with soot belched from chimneys in almost every section.

There is also a law which makes it an offense for a person to wear the emblem of a society or order to which he does not belong, yet there are some who consider the practice "smart."

Traffic regulations are disregarded every day in the week, especially in the downtown districts during the rush hours and the number of arrests made are nil.

Then there are the speed maniacs. Many are careless in turning corners and others on keeping to the right side of the road. All this carelessness is in direct violation of the rules of the road.

It is unlawful to sell tobacco or liquor to minors, and the police are supposed to try to keep a close watch on this sort of thing, but young boys manage to get what they are after, despite all the watching.

It is a violation of the law to work on Sunday, and this law is practically violated by every citizen in the state. (The law does not include housework.)

To play cards on Sunday is also an offense, and to engage in any kind of a game of chance is a felony. Even to drop a nickel into a slot machine is an offense, and the owner of the machine is equally as guilty.

Cruelty to a horse is unlawful, either in driving the animal too fast, or in overworking, yet this law is habitually violated every day in the week, and but very few arrests are made.

Selling tickets to a raffle is to run the risk of being sent to the penitentiary, and even children who sell chances in church raffles are committing a felony.

Thousands of men go hunting every Sunday in Wisconsin, and they are violating the law. If the dog dies it must be buried within twenty-four hours, otherwise another crime has been committed.

It is a penitentiary offense for a man to complain to the police that he has been given a worthless check, and then attempt to hush the matter up upon receiving the money back. This is called compounding a felony, yet it is a law violated almost every day.

To steal a ride on a railroad, to jump aboard a moving train, or to try and persuade any railroad employee not to wear his uniform, are all violations of the law and punishable by heavy fines.

To neglect to provide properly for a wife and children is criminal abandonment, and the penalty is two years in the house of correction, with no provision for the imposition of a fine.

Revolvers, knives of certain length, brass knuckles, slugs, shotguns, bludgeons are described as concealed weapons and to carry any of these articles is a serious offense and the guilty person can be sent to jail.

To "sic" one dog on another is laying the person liable to arrest and imprisonment.

The charge of malicious destruction of property or defacing of public property can be filed against the man who thoughtlessly scratches a match on the wall of a building or on a corner mail box.

The inconsistencies in laws, the laws not obeyed, and the inconsistencies of the statutes could be augmented in this list and make it as long as desired. The list appears almost endless, and new ones are being made every day.

Every time the legislature convenes another new batch of laws are adopted to be spread out on the statute books. When there is a meeting of

SAYS HARRY K. THAW HAS CROOKED MIND

Dr. A. P. Burrus reading the latest photograph of Harry K. Thaw from his latest photograph finds that the fugitive from Mattawan has a crooked mind. Judging from the shape of his head and the size of his brain as indicated by his face and features shown in the photograph Dr. Burrus declares that Thaw is by nature given to the animal tendencies taking especial delight in eating and drinking. He gives the following statement:

"Many pictures of Mr. Thaw have been published in the newspapers. This, the last just taken in Canada, is believed to be true to nature. At first glance we see the disproportion of body and brain. The brain is smaller than the face. Ears standing out from the head and three-fourths of an inch lower than normal, indicate large degeneracy and a vicious disposition. The cheek bones stand out showing large base of brain with strong appetite for food and drink. The head is small and conical indicating small mental culture and small moral organs. His brain is evenly developed showing a crooked mind. His head and face form a strong contrast with that of Mr. B. H. Nelsee whose brain is much larger than his face. In such an organization it is safe to say the animal passions will rule and that such will indulge too much in over-eating and strong drink. The organs of amateness are large and stimulated by strong drink overrule all other mental faculties. His reason being rather crooked deceives him making his judgment unsound which deludes him in carrying out his plans. That is to say that he labors under self delusions, but not the kind that diseased brain sees. Many experts have sworn that he was insane and as many that he was not."

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

THE DRIVING HORSE.

By Howard L. Rann.

THE driving horse is an extinct mammal which is getting harder to find than a ripe cantaloupe. In some localities he is so extinct that they have to use the horse-throated auto to haul and convey the pall bearers in a motor truck.

The reason for this is that the driving horse cannot go over fifteen miles an hour without lifting up the roadside with human freight, hair switches and broken ribs.

Prior to the advent of the automobile the driving horse could be found in every home. Father would go out to the barn before breakfast to massage him with a whiskbroom and accustom the fragrant owner of the hay mow. In the evening the entire family would go for a drive, after which the horse would walk all over father's feet while he was being unharnessed in the barn. The man who owned a family driving horse which could be driven up to a locomotive engine without standing up on his hind feet and sitting down in somebody's lap was considered a blue-veined nabob and aroused so much envy that he couldn't be elected justice of the peace.

The only place where people keep driving horses nowadays is in the state of Kentucky, where there is a lot of old fogies who have the unspeakable temerity to prefer a satinsuined Kentucky thoroughbred to the asthmatic gasoline tourabout. In certain parts of Kentucky it is said that you can still find driving horses with a family tree reaching back to the Norman conquest.

In the north the driving horse has been supplanted by the draft horse, which carries more wool and less brains than the sheep. The draft horse is about as deaf and light on his feet as a square piano, and the motor truck is fast urging him into the discard. It will not be long before the square-legged draft horse will be as great a curiosity as the spider-limbed roadster.

CHAPTER XV.

The Master Speaks Again.

Having thus detailed rather minutely the situation in which the city and the actors in its drama found themselves, it now becomes necessary to move the action forward to the point where the moneyed interests took a hand in the game.

That was brought about in somewhat more than fifty hours.

In the meantime the facts as to vibrations were published in all the papers; the dispatches and the relations between McCarthy and Monsieur X exclusively in the Despatch—to that organ's vast satisfaction and credit; and the possibilities of tragedy in none.

This latter fact was greatly to the credit of a maligned class of men. It is common belief that no cause is too sacred or no consequence too grave to give pause to the editorial rapacity for news. The present instance disproved that supposition. No journal, yellow or otherwise, contained a line of suggestion that anything beyond annoyance was to be feared from these queer manifestations.

The consequences on a mixed population like that of New York were very peculiar. The people naturally divided themselves into three classes. In the first were those who had received their warning from logic, friends, or the outside world; and who either promptly left town or, being unable to do so, lived in fear. In the second were that class of numerous body who, neurotically unbalanced or near the overbalance, shut instinctively the eyes of their reason and glowed with a devastating and fanatical religious zeal. Among these, so extraordinarily are we constituted, almost immediately grew up various sects, uniting only in the belief that the wrath of God was upon an iniquitous people.

By far the largest class of all, comprising the every-day busy bulk of the people, were those who accepted the thing at its face value, read its own papers, went about its business, and spared time to laugh at the absurdities or grieve at the inconveniences of the phenomena. With true American adaptability, it speedily accustomed itself to both the expectation of, and the coping with, unusual conditions. It went forth about its daily affairs; it started for home a little early in order to get there in season; it eschewed subways and theaters; it learned to wait patiently, when one of the three blights struck its world, as a man waits patiently for a shower to pass.

This class, as has been said, was preponderantly in the majority, but its mass was being constantly diminished as a little knowledge of danger seeped into its substance. News of the possible catastrophe passed from mouth to mouth; a world outside, waiting aghast at such fatality, began to get in its messages. Street-corner alarmists talked to such as would listen.

Thousands upon thousands left the city. Hundreds of thousands more, tied hard and fast by the strings of necessity, waited in an hourly growing dread.

"The sign" had been sent promptly at six o'clock, as promised. It proved Darrow's prediction by turning out to be a stoppage of the electrical systems. This time it lasted only half an hour—long enough to throw the traffic and transportation into confusion. It was followed at short intervals by demonstrations in light and sound; none was of long duration.

After the first few, their occurrence came freakishly, in flashes, as though the hidden antagonist delighted in confusing his immense audience. The messages he sent over the wireless in the Atlas Building grew more and more threatening and grandiose. They demanded invariably that McCarthy should be sought out and delivered up to a rather vaguely described vengeance; and threatened with dire calamities all the inhabitants of Manhattan if the Unknown's desires were not fulfilled. These threats grew more definite in character as time went on.

The effect of all this in the long run was, of course, confusion and instability. People laughed or cursed; but they also listened and reasoned. Gradually, throughout the city, dread was extending the blackness of its terror. A knowledge that would have caused a tremendous panic if it had been divulged suddenly now gave birth to a deep-seated uneasiness.

Where the panic would have torn men up by the roots and flung them

Thousands Upon Thousands Left the City.

In terrorized mobs through the congested ways and out into the inhospitable country, the uneasiness of dread held them covering at their accustomed tasks. They were afraid; but they had had time to think, and they realized what it would mean to leave their beloved or accustomed or necessary city, as the case might be. And it must be remembered that the definite knowledge of what might be feared was not yet disseminated among them.

But this attitude hurt business, and business struck back. The subways were practically deserted; the theaters empty; the accustomed careless life of the Great White Way thinned; the streams of life slackened. Furthermore, the intelligent criminal immediately discovered that ideal shields were being provided him gratis behind which to conduct his crimes. In the silence a man could blow out the side of a bank building with impunity, provided only he kept out of sight. In the darkness he could pilfer at will, with only the proviso that he forget not his gum shoes. The possibilities of night crime when electricity lacks have already been touched upon.

To meet unusual conditions the people individually and collectively rose to heights of forgotten ingenuity. The physical life of a city is so well established that the average city dweller grows out of the pioneer virtue of adaptability. Now once more these people were forced to meet new and untried conditions, to guard against new dangers, new opposing forces. In an incredibly short space of time they grew out of aimless panic. They learned to sit tight; to guard adequately their lives, their treasure, and even to a certain extent their time against undue loss.

In the meantime the moneyed powers had been prompt to act. They did not intend to stand idly while their pockets were being picked by untoward circumstances; nor did they intend to continue indefinitely the unusual expenditures necessary to guard themselves against even a greater loss. As there seemed to be two men to find, they employed the best of detectives to search for McCarthy; and Professor Eldridge, as the greatest living expert, to hunt down the Unknown. Thus unexpectedly Eldridge found himself with definite backing in his strange duel with Darrow.

It is now desirable to place before the reader samples of the messages sent by Monsieur X and received in the wireless office of the Atlas Building, after which we can proceed once more to follow out the sequence of events.

"To the People: The sign has been sent you. You must now believe. The traitor is among you, and you must hunt him down. This is your sacred duty, for I, your master, have laid it upon you."

round dozen of similar import, there came this:

"To the People: I, your master, am displeased with you. The visitations of darkness and of silence have been sent, but you have heeded little. I doubt not that ye search, as I have commanded, but you do not realize to the full your sacred obligation. You go about your business and you carry on your life as usual, and your affairs are not so important as these, my commands. Beware lest you draw down the wrath of the Lord's Anointed, I am patient with your ignorance, but give heed."

The last at present to which your attention is called came just before the events to be detailed:

"To the People: Your time is drawing short. You are a stubborn and a stubborn generation. My patience is ebbing away. You have been shown the power of my right hand, and you have gone your accustomed ways. You have defied the might of the Right Hand of God. Now I will lay on you my commands. You must seek out Apollyon and deliver him into my hands, and that shortly. I shall be patient yet a little while longer, for I know that you grope in darkness and have not the light that shines upon me. But soon I shall strike."

CHAPTER XVI.

The Professor's Experiment.

Throughout all this excitement Percy Darrow did absolutely nothing. He spent all his time, save that required for meals and the shortest necessary sleep, in a round-armed wooden chair in the wireless station of the Atlas Building. Jack Ward sat with him. Darrow rarely opened his mouth for speech, but smoked slowly a few cigarettes, and rolled many more, which he held unlighted in the corner of his mouth until they dropped to pieces. He watched quietly all that went on, glanced through such messages as came in from Monsieur X, read the papers, and dozed. To reporters he was affable enough in his drawing slow fashion, but had nothing to say.

"Eldridge is doing this," he said to them; "I'm only in the position of an interested spectator."

Eldridge had taken hold in a thoroughly competent way. Back of the cold precision of his undoubted scientific attainments lurked, unexpected by most, a strong ambition and a less admirable hankering for the lime-light. His opportunity to gratify all these appetites—science, advancement, and fame—was too good not to cause him the deepest satisfaction.

"I have determined," he told the reporters, "that this particular instrument alone receives the messages from the unknown perpetrator. Our investigations must be initiated, therefore, in this apartment."

"How do you explain it?" asked one of the reporters.

"I can not explain it scientifically," admitted Eldridge, "but I can surmise that the fact either purposely or accidental has to do either with this instrument's location or with some slight and undetermined peculiarity of its tuning."

"You could easily tell which by moving the instrument to another station where they aren't getting the messages now," suggested Darrow lazily.

"Certainly," snapped Eldridge, "any child could deduce that. But I fail to see the use or necessity for the determination at all—unless in a spirit of frivolous play. Our task is not to discover where the messages are sent, but whence they are sent."

He gazed frostily at the man who had interrupted him. Darrow smiled softly back.

"How far will your instrument carry in sending?" Eldridge asked Star-

"Its extreme is about two hundred miles."

"Then we can safely assume that a circle drawn with a two-hundred-mile radius would contain this man you call Monsieur X"—the newspapers had adopted Darrow's nickname for the Unknown—"since you have succeeded in communicating with him."

"Marvelous," said Darrow to Jack—but under his breath.

"As the sending of Monsieur X is faint, it follows that he is somewhere near the periphery of this circle, or that he is possessed of a primitive or weak instrument. By the doctrine of probabilities we would be justified in concluding against the latter supposition."

"How's that, Professor?" asked the Morning Register man. "It doesn't get to me."

"He is evidently a man not only of scientific attainments, but of immense scientific possessions—as is evidenced by these phenomenal results he is able to accomplish. But we are not justified in reasoning according to the doctrine of probabilities. Therefore, we shall proceed methodically. I have already made my preparations."

Eldridge looked about him with an air of triumph.

"I am fortunate enough to have, in the present crisis, unlimited financial backing," he said. "Therefore, I am in a position to carry out the most exhaustive of experiments."

He stretched his hand out for a long roll, which he laid flat upon the table, pinning down the corners.

"Here is a map of the Eastern States," said he. "I have drawn a circle on it with a two-hundred-mile radius. At this moment a private instrument with a full crew to string sending and receiving wires is two hundred miles from here on a railroad. It has for its transportation a private train, and it will be given a clear right of way."

"Have you found yourself able to communicate with this Monsieur X at any time?"

Dinner Stories

A Kentucky mountain woman fell ill and for the first time in his life her husband had to work. It devolved upon him to nurse the invalid, look after a large family of low-headed children, milk the cow, feed the pig, cook the meals and tend a straggly half acre of corn.

"They're married now," he said, "and on a yachting cruise around the world. 'This was a sure case truly'—"

Mr. Belasco smiled.

Bernhardt's extreme slowness was at one time the jest of Paris. The French journalist, Henri Rochefort, who died recently, once wrote:

Fontenelle listened to everything and he offended no one by disputing anything. At the close of his life he was asked the secret of his success, and he replied that it was by observing two maxims. "Everybody may be right" and "Everything may be so."
